

Nominating a binding beneficiary

As superannuation can go a long way in supporting your dependants after you're gone, it's important to consider where you want your super and any applicable insurance benefits ('death benefit') to go when you die.

A binding death benefit nomination can give you peace of mind as it provides greater certainty about who will receive your death benefit when you pass away.

What is a binding nomination?

A binding death benefit nomination is a legal document which binds Brighter Super to pay your benefit to your nominated beneficiary (or beneficiaries) provided it is still a valid nomination at the time of your death.

It may be particularly useful if you have a more complex family situation (for example, ex-partner/s or children of current and former relationships).

Who can I nominate as beneficiary?

For the nomination to be valid and binding, each person you nominate must be either your legal personal representative or a dependant at the time of the nomination, and at the time of your death.

A person is considered to be a dependant if they are:

1. Your spouse (whether legal or de facto); or
2. Your child as defined in the Family Law Act 1975, including:
 - an adopted child, a stepchild or an ex-nuptial child of the person; or
 - a child of the person's spouse; or
3. A person in an interdependent relationship with you; or
4. A person who is financially dependent on you.

What is an interdependent relationship?

According to the Australian Government, two people (whether related to each other or not) have an interdependent relationship if:

- They have a close personal relationship; and
- They live together; and
- One or each of them provides the other with financial support, and
- One or each of them provides the other with domestic support and personal care.

- An interdependent relationship also exists if two people have a close personal relationship and the other requirements aren't satisfied because either or both of them suffer from a physical, intellectual or psychiatric disability.

Who is my legal personal representative?

Your legal personal representative is the executor of your Will or the administrator of your estate. If you nominate your estate, your death benefit will be paid to your legal personal representative so they can distribute the funds in accordance with your wishes.

You don't need to provide us with details of your legal personal representative, we will confirm that information at the time of your death.

How long does a binding death benefit nomination last?

Brighter Super offer two types of binding death benefit nominations: lapsing and non-lapsing.

A valid lapsing binding death benefit nomination is legally binding and will lapse three years from the date you sign the form. Once it lapses, the nomination will no longer be valid.

A non-lapsing binding death benefit nomination is legally binding and does not lapse. We recommend reviewing your nomination regularly to ensure that it is still appropriate for your situation.

When is a nomination invalid?

Your nomination will be considered invalid if the individual(s) nominated on this form aren't your legal personal representative or a valid dependant at the time of completing this request and/or is no longer a valid dependant at the time of your death. For example your nomination would be invalid if the person nominated passes away before you do or you are nominating a friend who is not a financial dependant.

For non-lapsing nominations, your nomination will also become invalid if you have nominated your spouse and later permanently separate, including undergoing a financial split or divorce, or if you begin a new relationship with a different spouse.

Important information

1. Signing the form

Your form must be completed and signed by you. We do not accept forms signed by your Attorney even where a valid Power of Attorney document, Administrative order or guardianship arrangement provides authority for them to act on your behalf.

If you are requesting a lapsing binding death benefit nomination, your nomination must be signed by TWO adult witnesses (other than any of the beneficiaries named) in your presence at the same time and date as your declaration.

2. Existing reversionary beneficiary on your Pension account

If you have an existing reversionary beneficiary, you must remove the reversionary beneficiary before you can make a binding death benefit nomination. You can revoke a reversionary beneficiary from your Pension account(s) at any time by completing the Update your reversionary beneficiary form available on our website brightersuper.com.au.

If you hold a Brighter Super Classic Pension account, you are unable to make any changes to your reversionary nomination.

3. What if my nomination is invalid?

If your nomination is invalid at the time of your death, we'll consider your wishes but will use our discretion when paying out your account balance(s).

If your nomination is no longer valid and you do not want Brighter Super to decide how to distribute your benefit, you will need to complete a new Binding death benefit nomination form to update the beneficiaries on your account.

If you are making a non-lapsing binding death benefit nomination we recommend reviewing your nomination regularly to ensure that it is still valid. Non-Lapsing binding death benefit nominations can also be made in Member Online.
